

Editorial

Angela Rodrigues, Our second issue of 2020 Northumbria University, UK includes a reflection from the EHPS President - Professor Vera Araujo-Soares – on the importance of Health Psychology in the Time of Covid-19.

This issue also includes several articles disseminating the activities undertaken by the different subsections of the EHPS, including the Practical Health Psychology Blog, and EHPS grant winner reports (e.g. workshops, conference).

A brief overview of the articles included in this issue can be found below.

Professor Vera Araujo-Soares (EHPS President) reflects on the importance of Health Psychology in the Time of Covid-19, providing an update from the European Health Psychology Society.

Cross recently joined the Practical Health Psychology blog, as Head Editor to support the translation of health psychology research to practice and to help promote the discipline through the dissemination of practical health psychology to health care professionals. The article provides a brief spotlight on Ainslea Cross's biography.

Zimmermann & Encantado report provides a testimony of participating in the 2019 CREATE workshop. The authors share useful tips on conducting systematic reviews as discussed during the workshop.

Ivanova reflects on attending the 33rd Conference of the European Health Psychology Society and provides an account of key take home messages.

Alice Le Bonniec reports on the 33rd Conference of the European Health Psychology Society as grant winner.

Hope you enjoy reading this issue!

Angela Rodrigues, PhD
Editor-in-chief

Angela Rodrigues

Department of Psychology,
Northumbria University, UK

angela.rodrigues@northumbria.ac.uk